

God expects us to take the moment and live it to its fullness. A good example is a bottle of wine. The growing conditions for the grapes can never be duplicated, the grapes are crushed and placed into the barrel for processing and then the time comes for bottling. The wine then has a time span when it is at its peak, and once that has passed, it will never reach its full potential again. In fact, there are vintage bottles of wine, that when they are opened, they have become vinegar.

We are only given this time on earth at this moment. All of our experiences are for this moment. Do not wait until you have become "vinegar" before you open yourself up!
